Born in 1830, Joseph was only 12 when he joined the Royal Navy for service on ships and only 13 when promoted to sub-lieutenant during the voyage. This log in highly detailed recording almost daily entries of position, bearings, and employed duties including at Hong Kong, Manila, Victoria Bay, Sooloo Bay, Joseph was made a full Lieutenant in 1852 and distinguished himself in his gallant actions in the Crimean War being promoted to Commander in 1855, he was made a retired Captain in 1870 and was promoted to Rear Admiral on the retired list of 1881. HMS Samarang was a 28-gun, teak, Atholl-class full-rigged ship of the Royal Navy. She | was launched at Cochin in 1822 by the East India Company. She served in various stations around the world until seeing action in the First Opium War, and was then employed, under Edward Belcher, in surveying the coast of Borneo from 1843-1846 after which she became a guardship at Gibraltar before being sold for breaking in 1883. Captain Sir Edward Belcher was a British Naval Office, hydrographer and explorer. He first joined the Navy in 1812 and in 1825 was with Frederick William Beechey a Naval Officer who was commanded to explore the Bering Strait on HMS Blossom. Belcher's own command came in 1825 when on HMS Sulphur was tasked with continuing Beechey's work surveying of the South African Pacific coast. He was ordered to return to England in 1839 but on the route was despatched to engage in the China Wars. On 25th January 1841 Belcher and his men were the first of the British Fleet to land on Possession Point and Belcher undertook the first British survey of Hong Kong Harbour. Eventually returning to England in 1842 he was made a Knight Bachelor. 1843 saw Belcher despatched to command HMS Samarang and ordered to survey the East Indian Archipelago. His crew included the English physician and naturalist Arthur Adams who went on to edit two volumes of "The Zoology of the Voyage of HMS Samarang". Belcher went on to command the last and largest expedition to the Arctic to rescue Sir John Franklin, his ships including HMS Resolute which was abandoned when it became stuck in the sea ice. HMS Resolute was later recovered by the Americans and upon its salvage for timber a desk was made and presented as a token of thanks for the recovery to President Rutherford B Hayes which is still used in the Oval Office today. Later Belcher was made an Admiral in 1872. Belcher is well remembered for his extensive hydrography and surveying, a highly venomous seasnake, Hydrophis belcheri, is also named in his honour. £70-100 157 Group of six medals, including WW1 pair, to MID. Medals: a group of three, Crimea 1854-56, with Sebastopol bar, to 3064. WILLIAM . LAMB. 93. SUTHERLAND. HIGHLANDERS; Turkish Crimea Medal; Indian Mutiny 1857-58, with Relief of Lucknow bar, to Wm. LAMB, 93rd HIGHLANDERS; together with related documents including army discharge March 1863; Account Book and Monthly Settlements, Soldiers and Sailors Families Association Garden Fete invitation and programme, Indian Mutiny Commemoration ephemera and Coronation 1902 admittance, Metropolitan Police Certificate of Good Conduct, correspondence, marriage certificate, funeral photographs, copy newspaper obituary stating "Deceased was one of the gallant "thin red line" which was left in the stiffest fighting, but which withstood all enemy attacks to break it", in a leather attaché case.

An obituary notice from August 1915 records that William Lamb "served 11 years in the Army as a private in the 93rd Foot (Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders) and went right through the Indian Mutiny unscathed. He took part in the battles of the Alma and Sebastopol ... [he] was one of the Thin Red Line which was left in the stiffest of fighting, but which withstood all enemy attacks to break it."

The first action the 93rd Sutherland Highlanders saw was on the 20th September 1854 in the Battle of the Alma before the Highland Brigade moving on to Balaklava.

The "Thin Red Line" was a military action involving the 93rd Foot Regiment (Sutherland Highlanders) which took place on the 25th October 1854 during the Battle of Balaklava. Around 200 soldiers led by Sir Colin Campbell were defending the strategically important port city of Balaklava and were attacked by a large force of Russian cavalry. Despite being hugely outnumbered the small force managed to repel the Russian cavalry, even attempting to counter-attack and Sir Colin Campbell ordering them to hold their positions shouting "93rd, damn you Highlanders for all that eagerness!". The action is not an example of fierce hand to hand battle but of courage discipline in the face of a terrifyingly powerful cavalry charge. On the same day one of the most calamitous descisions in British Military history was also taken in the same battle - the Charge of the Light Brigade. The Thind Red Line was depicted in a painting by Robert Gibb in the National Collection previously on show at the National War Museum, Edinburgh Castle. The Times war correspondent William Russell saw the action describing the Russian cavalry as charging at "thin red streak tipped with a line of steel", this waslater to become known as The Thin Red Line.

Seige of Sebastopol. This saw the 93rd in action including significant trench fighting, culminating in the fall of the city. This was the last episode in the Crimean War.

The 93rd (Sutherland Highlanders) were involved the the Relief of Lucknow under the command of Sir Colin Campbell. Their route to The Residency at Lucknow taking the force past the Villa and gardens known as Sikandar/Secundra Bargh. While passing the gardens the force encoutered heavy fire, responding with close bombardment a hole was created in the wall which was immediately rushed by soldiers from the 93rd Sutherland Highlanders and the 4th Punjab Infantry. Together with the main force attacking the gates access was gained to the gardens. Inside the compound approximately 2000 mutineers retreated to the main villa where no quarter was given and all were killed. Sikander Bargh was photographed in 1858 by Felice Beato and the action depicted in a watercolour by Orlando Norie in the collection of the National Army Museum.

Transcription of a hand written document by William Lamb:

Canada, 8 th April 1856 - Campbell
Soldiers of the 42 – 79 and 93 Old Highland Brigade with whom I passed the early and perilous days of this war, I have now to take leave of you. In a few hours I shall be on board a ship never to see you again as a body. A long farewell; I am now old, and shall not be called to serve any more and nothing will remain to me but the memory of any campaigns and of the enduring hardy, generous soldiers with whom I have been associated, whose name and glory will long be kept alive in the hearts of our countrymen. When you go home as you gradually fulfil your term of service back to his family and his cottage you will tell the story of your immortal advance in that victorious echelon up the heights of Alma and of the old Brigadier who led and loved you so well; your children and your children's children will repeat the tale to other generations when only a few lines of history will remain to record, all the enthusiasm and discipline which have borne you so stoutly to the end of this. Our native land will never forget the name of the Highland Brigade and in some future war that nation will call for one equal to this, which it can never surpass. Though I shall be gone, the thought of you will go with me wherever I may be and cheer any old age with a glorious recollection of danger confronted and hardships endured, a pipe will
